Richard B. Kendall's practice focuses on complex litigation, and his experience spans more than three decades, several continents, and leading judicial and arbitration forums worldwide. A former federal prosecutor, Mr. Kendall has prevailed in every one of the dozens of civil trials and arbitrations in which he has served as lead counsel representing both the defense and plaintiff sides. Over time, he has become the go-to litigator and trial counsel for his clients, some of whom, like Paramount and MTV, he has represented for more than 25 years.

Mr. Kendall has argued and successfully resolved sophisticated, contentious, and unprecedented challenges to the First Amendment and the rights of privacy and publicity. He has argued on preemption of state consumer laws and environmental claims against the military before the U.S. Supreme Court. In addition, Mr. Kendall also litigated asset confiscation and recovery claims connected to the fall of Saigon and the overthrow of former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos.

His courtroom background includes serving as lead trial counsel in dozens of trials and appeals in the federal and state courts, including two arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court. He is a mainstay on The Hollywood Reporter's Power Lawyer list and, according to the prestigious Chambers & Partners legal ranking organization, he is one of the West Coast's "strongest litigators."

As a commercial litigator and advisor on transactional matters, Mr. Kendall represents major entertainment studios, leading media companies, securities, banking and financial institutions, and foreign governments in complex, sensitive, and high-stakes disputes and negotiations. Current significant areas of his counsel include distribution rights battles, copyright, financing, and profit-participation disputes.

Representative Matters

Media, Entertainment, and Intellectual Property

- Defended a studio at trial in federal court in New York against claims of securities fraud.
- Defended TV networks in a class action suit brought by composers and music recording companies. The plaintiffs alleged that Mr. Kendall's clients had committed copyright infringement resulting from the use of music in TV programming.
- Handled dozens of disputes on behalf of film studios and TV networks in federal and foreign courts relating to the ownership or control of copyrighted materials.
- Retained by video-game manufacturers and developers to handle litigation over the rights to use likenesses and images.
- Advised and counseled clients on the use and infringement of trademarks related to numerous entertainment properties and brand-name retail goods.
- Resolved litigations between TV networks over reality-TV formats.
- Defended a TV network against claims of invasion of privacy arising from television programming.
- Litigated between TV networks or film studios and the many authors, composers, and submitters of ideas who claim ownership of successful TV shows and theatrical motion pictures.
- Defended media companies in actions involving major injuries suffered in accidents that occurred during the filming of theatrical motion pictures and TV shows.
- Represented several of the largest national media companies in litigation with cities over fees and restrictions related to outdoor advertising.
- Represented a major media company in defense of claims arising from text-messaging advertising.
- Defended TV networks and retail stores in consumer false-advertising claims.
- Defended consumer class action involving the video game industry that alleged false advertising and defective products.
- Defended a TV producer in the appellate courts against charges that the producer discriminated against a pregnant actress. The producer was alleged to have terminated the actress rather than retain her as the vixen in the cast of a prominent soap opera.
- Defended an environmental activist website against claims of a prominent celebrity that a photograph of her personal residence infringed on her privacy rights and misappropriated her publicity rights.

- Represented a TV network in a grand jury investigation relating to the content of broadcasts that allegedly depicted harm to animals.
- Represented most of the major film studios and producers of TV programs in litigation with international free and pay TV broadcasters, as well as firm-processing and video-distribution vendors.
- Managed sophisticated commercial conflicts involving contract rights of refusal and first-negotiated and most-favored nation clauses. Other issues dealt with included terminations, renewals of long-term output agreements, and insolvencies. As part of the resolution process, Mr. Kendall appeared before numerous state and federal courts in the U.S. and European and Asian Courts as well as Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) forums.

Complex Commercial Litigation

- Obtained a complete defense victory at the trial and appellate court level for Paramount Pictures Corporation in federal securities, contract, and business tort actions related to complex domestic and international film financing transactions.
- Obtained summary judgment for the estate of Robert Philpott, who had been sued by the ex-wife of Dick Wolf, creator of the "Law and Order" TV franchise. She had claimed Mr. Philpott and a mediator deceived her when they helped negotiate the couple's divorce settlement, thus denying her a financial share of Mr. Wolf's subsequent agreement for additional years of "Law and Order."
- Secured summary judgment and a financial award on behalf of Viacom International Inc. in a lawsuit against toymaker MGA Entertainment Inc. for breach of contract over unpaid advertising bills and a 2012 co-finance agreement with Viacom to broadcast a TV series based on the toymaker's line of Lalaloopsy dolls.
- Successfully defended Citibank before the LA Superior Court, the California Court of Appeal, the California Supreme Court, and the U.S. Supreme Court in a consumer class action challenging credit-card late fees. When the argument eventually came before the U.S. Supreme Court, Mr. Kendall prevailed on the basis that state consumer laws were preempted by the National Bank Act.
- Advised and counseled some of the nation's largest banking institutions in disputes with borrowers and asset-backed insurers relating to unpaid loans and insolvencies. Disputes ranged from domestic litigation between banks and major borrowers arising from underwater real estate loans to international litigation

- over loan portfolios covering resort properties in the U.S. and throughout the world.
- Represented two U.S.-based international banks against claims of Vietnamese citizens who held deposits in those banks when Saigon fell and the banks' assets were confiscated by the Communist government.
 - Represented a major TV studio in securities litigation in the federal courts of New York stemming from an unsuccessful film-state financing. Engaged previously in connection with similar litigation in England and New York involving insurance-backed, film-slate financings.
 - Represented a major investment bank in the trial of a class action suit alleging improper payment of "greenmail" to a corporate raider.
 - Conducted internal and international investigations into frauds committed by executives employed by domestic and multinational companies, and defended the resulting securities claims brought by shareholders or government entities.
 - Won summary judgment for the California State Senate in a redistricting challenge.
 - Served as counsel to the Brunei Investment Authority and related entities in cross-border litigations stemming from Prince Jefri's management of Amedeo Group.
