Philip Kelly represents leading motion picture studios, broadcast and cable TV networks, production companies, entertainment and sports agencies, as well as individuals and companies outside of the entertainment industry in legal disputes in state and federal courts and arbitrations throughout the country.

Mr. Kelly regularly handles disputes related to profit participation, intellectual property licensing, copyrights, film and TV distribution agreements, film slate financing, securities and common law fraud, and breach of contract. Currently, Mr. Kelly is litigating several high-profile cases involving the financing, distribution, and accounting for large slates of motion pictures along with copyright infringement actions involving popular movies and TV shows. In addition to handling litigation matters for his clients, Mr. Kelly also provides substantial pre-litigation counseling and advice to help clients avoid litigation altogether.

Representative Matters

Media, Entertainment, and Intellectual Property

- Obtained complete defense victory in the trial and appellate courts for Paramount Pictures in a complex commercial dispute involving overlapping issues of entertainment and securities law.
- Secured a dismissal, a public apology, and monetary compensation for legendary composer Hans Zimmer and several companies in a copyright infringement claim concerning the Academy Award-winning film "12 Years A Slave," along with its score and soundtrack album.
- Currently representing NBCUniversal in a significant dispute related to the sale and distribution of a slate of films now owned by a hedge fund.
- Represented Paramount Pictures in a putative class action related to the treatment of home video revenues on films produced prior to 1981 for purposes of reporting and payment to profit participants. The case is one of several brought against all of the major movie studios.
- Represented Viacom and Viacom Media Networks in a copyright infringement lawsuit involving the hit TV children's show "PAW Patrol."

- Won a dismissal of a copyright infringement claim and an award of damages for client, Viacom and Viacom Media Networks, as well as the production company and producers, in a federal lawsuit involving the hit VH1 television show “Love & Hip Hop.”
- Represented Viacom Inc. and Viacom Media Networks in an action involving numerous tort claims, including misappropriation of likeness and defamation, arising out of the production and broadcast of a reality TV program.
- Obtained summary judgment on behalf of Creative Artist Agency in an action asserting tort and contract claims related to a highly successful TV series.
- Represented Wasserman Media Group in a variety of sports-and-entertainment-related disputes.
- Represented Universal Studios in an accounting dispute with StudioCanal related to a series of films produced by Working Title Films.
- Represented multiple defendants—a TV production company, broadcast network, and producers – in a copyright infringement action involving a hit reality TV series. Obtained summary judgment, after discovery, in favor of the clients on the copyright infringement claim.
- Obtained summary judgment on behalf of a broadcast network facing allegations of failure to pay royalties made by composers of background music. Claims involved the release of an episodic TV series from the 1950s to 1970s on videocassette and DVD and the royalties for the synchronization licenses of the compositions.
- Represented Hachette Book Group in a breach of contract action brought by William Paul Young, the author of the best-selling book, “The Shack.”
- Represented Universal Music Group before the California Supreme Court in a landmark case involving the scope of attorney-client privilege. Served as second chair on the client’s subsequent trial victory.
